From California in Ten Days. The first pony express, from California, ar rived at St. Joseph yesterday, making the trip from Western to Eastern telegraphic communication in ten days, The Case of Mary Ann Butler.

The real sympathy which was interested in this affair has been seized upon by the city press and made a leading feature for several days, and, as usual, it has been regarded as evidence of newspaper ability and enterprise to make it as sensational as possible, and infinte the excitement to the greatest possible dimensions.

The case was that of a mother and her husband claiming the custody of her child, which during her former difficulties, or dissoluteness, or both, which led to her imprisonment, had been placed at the Orphan Asylum and afterward given to Mr. T. F. Weightman, in whose hands she was doubtless kindly taken cure of, and whose family and the child seem to be mutually attached. The child is a preceedings girl of six years.

The mother having married a man whose ability to support the child is not questioned, they claim its custody, and for some time she has been importuning its protector for it, and the Court to interfere. The case was brought up on habeas corpus, issued by Judge Hilton, of the Probate Court. The natural and legal right of the mother and her husband to the custody of her child will be conceded at once. Then the only question is, have they divested themselves of either of these rights? It was not pretended in Court that the step-father has. His counsel challenged the production of any evidence to show that he was unfit to exercise his legal rights in the matter. So far the case at law would seem clear. But those who contest the restoration of the child, do it on the ground that the mother has been of dissolute habits, and has been arrested several times

Has she been worse than hundreds of criminals who are now undergoing penalties for the most atrocious crimes in our State Prisons? Yet when did the law interfere to deprive them of their children? Where will the law or society stop, if immorality or drunkcunets is to be made a cause for taking children from their parents and putting them into the custody of the public? And if soclety is to begin practice on this rule, are there not hundreds of children in the very depths of degradation and want, in conditions utterly hopeless, whose parents, if they have any, will make no resistance to relief. on whom society will find abundant scope for its sympathy, without making a contest with this woman's affection, and with her husband, who can support the child above

But she has been in the city prison, and among the thousands of vagabonds who have graduated from that institution, this woman alone is to be robbed of her child, because she is a woman, and society is virtuous. Also, it is said, she abandoned the child: that is, she was in prison, and the child was put at the Orphan Asylum, in which she acquiesced; certainly not an unnatural nor unfeeling abandonment under the circumstances. It is said that this woman was kept for sevthe jails!

But, suppose she has been guilty of gross immorality; who were there among the symthe judgment of the Court, if none but parents who, for the like immorality, would consent to be deprived of their children, were called

If this woman's sins had been as scarlet, repentance will make them white as wool, and As bad as she can have been, were accepted by the Savior, in spite of the hootings of society, and of calls upon the mob to interfere. It is not alleged that she is not now reputable. We do not admit that the question has any thing to do with the case. Degradation does not destroy maternal affection, nor in any degree its rights.

But religious fanaticism has been stirred other city within our knowledge. The

"Beyond the strictly sectarian circle with which Judge Hilton would seem to be in the closest affinity, there can hardly be much di-versity of opinion as to the character of the proceedings to which he has lent his official influence."

Judge Hilton is a Catholic; so is the mother, while the Orphan Asylum and Mr. Weightman are Protestant; and the Gazette would have it understood that the eternal salvation or perdition of this child depends on the judgment of the Court, and that a Catholic is disqualified to sit in judgment on the right of a Catholic mother to her own child. The Times also, after its kind, talks of the mother being "backed by ecclesiastical

The child also shrank from the step-father when he went to take her, according to the order of the Court. Why should she not? He was a stranger to her, acting on the part of her mother, who was excluded from the Court. She had been taught to shun him and her mother. Who would be willing that their children should be subject to interested influences and allowed to choose in the same way? The sympathy of the bystanders broke out at this, and an excellent citizen said, as is reported in the Gazette, "I hope the mob will prevent it."

Sudden Death of a Spanish Minister While the Lyanger of the Chambers, was attacked with a paralytic stroke, and died on the 14th ult. THE DAILY PRESS. hard known and in such a contest as was here nvoked, it is quite likely that the friends of the parents, either by nationality or religion, would be found quite as prempt to go in on their muscle as any of our most distinguished citizens, and quite as likely to come off victo-

A successful appeal to arms is a glorious revolution; but to call for a mob to resist the law and then come halting off with a broken head, is quite the reverse, and leaves un_ pleasant ulterior questions to be settled by vertisements early. Newsboys will do well the ordinary tribunals. Mob law is a game that two can play at; and it is said in scripture that a wise man sits down and calculates his forces before he goes to war.

The present state of the case will be learned from our law report in another column. The Court of Common Pleas insued a writ of error, and ordered the Sheriff to deliver the child to Mr. Weightman, on his executing as bond for $500 to produce it to abide the dreision of the Court in June.

Advertising. In other places of the size of Cincinnati, the persons who regularly advertise in the line of their business, are counted by hundreds or thousands; in this city, by dozens; two or three scores, more or less, comprise the whole. The advertising pages of each paper is to a considerable extent a fac simile of those of the others; and a person in a distant city, glancing over the columns of our newspapers devoted to advertising, would be led to believe that we had searcely an hundred men among us engaged in actual business pursuits. It may be that some of our fellow-citizens are so favored in their affairs, that they have no need to advertise, in order to do all the business they desire. Indeed, we are informed that, with some, such is the case. But it can not be generally so. A large number would no doubt willingly increase their trade if it were practicable so to do; and yet, except in a few instances, it does not seem to occur to them that something may be done in the desirable direction, by a judicious investment in advertising through the newspapers.

It is not in the power of the proprietors of public journals to deny the use of their columns, at the established rates to any who apply; and yet they would greatly prefer to see the space which they afford distributed among a large number of advertisers than occupied by a few, even though the profit were no greater. As it is these columns give negative but significant testimony of a want of enterprise, of an absense of ordinary business vigor and confidence, which is not calculated to impress people in other sections of the country with very exalted notions either of our numbers, our wealth, or our activity. To a large number of the business men of this city, there are probably no means within their reach so likely, at anything like the same expense, to increase their operations and their profits as advertising. In these days, to know how to advertise, and when to advertise, and where to advertise constitutes no small share of a business education. Not to understand this is a defect; to be indifferent to the knowledge argues a want of that energy without which great success is seldom realized. The men who have achieved the shining successes within our own day have, in most cases, been those who not only knew how to advertise, but had the sagacity to make full use of their knowledge.

Disgusted at the Piping Times of Peace. The Gazette characterizes the course of Judge Hilton in permitting the child, Mary Butler, to remain in the custody of the Sheriff, after he had decided that she should be given up to her mother, and the mob had given symptoms of a riot, as being "completely cowed," as having "wavered, yielded, backed down, faltered, surrendered and showed culpable weakness."

It seems by the reports in the Gazette and other city papers, that a prominent citizen called on the mob to resist the decision of the Court; that "many of our best citizens declared that the order of the Court should not clared that the order of th eral months in the city prison on some charge | clared that the order of the Court should not | which was not substantiated. Perhaps that | befulfilled;" that the Deputy-Sheriff positively should be sufficient cause for robbing her of refused to obey the order of the Court; that her child and proclaiming her an outcast of there was no officer to carry out its order, and a "popular demonstration" to resist it.

Under such circumstances, the only apparent recourse for the Court was either to allow the child to remain in the custody of the Sheriff, until some means could be propathizing audience, qualified to cast the first | allow the child to remain in the custody of stone at her? and how large would the mob | the Sheriff, until some means could be prohave been that was invoked to interfere with vided to enforce its orders, or to let the mob come in collision, in which case, if our first citizens had the pluck to carry out their demonstration, a scene would have resulted not very creditable to our city. A desire to present the substraction of the most able and importations, a scene would have resulted not the substraction of the most able and importation, a scene would have resulted not "Philostratius" and other infidels are invited to attend and question the spirits. serve the peace and the respect for the law may seem very cowardly to organs of musfit her for Heaven; and will it be said that it cle like the Gazette; yet, until we can all go into training and get into fighting condition, we had better have such judges on the bench. The approaching international combat makes everybody belligerent, but we had better re tain the Courts until we get a little more accustomed to travel on our muscle.

Anniversary Celebration of the Y. M. M.

L. Association.
In another column will be found the programme of the proposed celebration of the up in the matter, an element more prominent twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment in the Cincinnati press than in that of any of the Young Men's Mercantile Library Association of this city. It will be seen that the provisions for a brilliant entertainment are ample; and taking into consideration the large space which the association fills in social and literary affairs among us, and the great number of old and respectable citizens who take pride in its doings, there is no reason to doubt that the attendance will be equal to the dignity of the occasion.

THE Pastors of St. Philomena Church deny, in yesterday's Commercial, that they have refused absolution to Catholic girls living in Hebrew families, as was charged by the Hebrew Rabbi, in that paper, the day previous. The charge was improbable on its face, and that it and the retaliation threatinfluence," as if ecclesiastical influence was ened, should be expanded by the newspapers required to instigate a mother's affection for of this city, shows the readiness with which they seize on everything that can excite religious bigotry and intolerance.

An appeal to force is only to the higher law. The right always exists. It is for each one to decide when the law becomes unendurable and a resort to arms justifiable. But they who appeal to force to resist the law, should themselves be ready to give and take
